BOSTON MORNING POST.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1837.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Dear Sir.—You can learn as much of the news from the papers, as I can tell you. By the vote of Saturday, the agitators of the slavery question, both at the South and the North, have met with a signal rebuke. We have these in both these sections, who wish to dissolve the Union, and aim at using the slavery question as a wedge to divide it. But I have no belief that they will succeed. Every man of sense knows, that while the North dislikes slavery, and will not tolerate it there; the great mass of the people have no desire to interfere in any way, with this, or any other of the social regulations of the Southern states—that if slavery be a sin, it is a matter which alone concerns those who tolerate it—it is an evil and a burden, it is upon the shoulders of those who chose to bear it.

The South, too, can have no desire to meet this question. There are ambitious men in that region, who would like to rule the divided states, as they cannot rule the United States. But the mass of the South are fully apprised of the benefits of the Union to them; and they will yet put down the semi lunatics, who have assumed an undeserved influence in public affairs.

The House have had Mr Whitney before them to-day. He denied having any design to treat the House, or the Committee with contempt, he was willing to testify, if he could be protected from insult, and the danger of assassination. The matter stands adjourned to Wednesday, to enable Mr Whitney to prepare for his defence, and to call witnesses to prove the design of Wise and Payton upon his life. It is time for the people to look into this assumed authority of the House. Congress is filled with lawyers, educated more in the English, than in the American law; mere men of precedents, that is, read in the history of what has been done in the English Parliaments, and in British Courts. They will seek in vain in our constitution, for the authority of the House to act in any case judicially. Their power is derivative, not inherent, they hold not by prescription, but by delegation, and they cannot rightfully enlarge their power of Attorney, the constitution, by construction.

The House, of itself, has no power to summon witnesses, or to put them upon oath. Congress no doubt might make a law authorising both, but the resolution of the House is not a law. You have, in Massachusetts, I am told, a law forbidding any person to take or to administer an oath not authorized or required by law—that the officers of the Banks in Boston summoned to depose in Whitney's case, considered themselves forbidden by this law to swear on the requisition of the Committee, as the resolve of the House under which they acted was not a law. And the committee taking the same view of it, received their statement without the oath to it.

Peyton and Wise's conduct towards Mr Whitney meets with universal reprobation—their blood-thirsty designs and assassin-like avowals must sink them, in the view of every moral man, to a level with the stiletto lazaroni of Italy. Mr Whitney is placed on high ground. Wise I do not know. I have seen Peyton, and have had an opportunity to judge of his mind. He is not a clear-headed man. Judging from the formation of his head, which I consider a good index, I think him a man of impulse and obstinacy, but without true courage or real firmness of purpose. Nature made him to be rash, but mean and cowardly; and should he chance to see this picture he will start that he is known so well. He and Wise ought to be expelled the House, and driven from the society of high-minded men. They disgrace the stations they occupy and the land that gave them birth.

Mr Jarvis of Maine has raised himself much by bringing up Bell of Tennessee for a bullying attempt. The North must show more of this spirit.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in this city, dated

Montevideo, 18th Nov. 1836.—On the 15th inst. at 8 A. M. a signal was made from the station on the Mount, that a Brig was aground on the English bank, about 20 miles from this place, and generally supposed to be an American vessel. Our Consul, Mr Patrick, immediately on hearing this repaired on board the United States sloop of War, Erie, and informed Commodore Renshaw—and of the reports in circulation of her being an American—he also informed Commodore R. that the Capt. of the Port was about sending a small boat down to ascertain who she was. If she proved to be an American, the Consul was to make it known by a signal to the Commodore. At this time the wind was light from the south-east, and it was supposed the Brig might possibly get off by throwing part of her cargo overboard, as there was little or no sea on at the time. Nothing further was heard during the day, and no assistance sent, with the exception of the small boat with three men, as the Capt. of the Port would not allow any vessel to go down to her.

On the morning of the 16th, signal made, "Brig in same position as yesterday," wind about north-east, during the night it had blown very fresh from the eastward. At 11 o'clock, A. M., the Captain of the Port, supposing the brig would go to pieces soon, dispatched two Launches, and at 12, three or four schooners. Commodore R. (twenty-four hours, at least, after he knew of the Brig's being on shore,) put 15 or 20 men, and two midshipmen, on board one of the schooners, the "Rosa," having previously assured the Government his men would not claim salvage in case they should be the means of saving any property. About 6 P. M., the boat was seen about nine miles off, returning from the wreck, and communicating with the Rosa, which vessel immediately bore up for the Port, as well as the Launches and the other Schooners. At 7 P. M., the boat arrived at the Mole, having been absent thirty hours; reported the Brig to be the "Sultana," salt loaded and abandoned, full of water, sails flying—brought with them her ensign, medicine-chest, and a few charts, all that was remaining in the cabin. Today, another boat has come up from the wreck, bringing with them, among other things, a barrel of beef or pork, marked "Falmouth Stores," which leaves no doubt this is the vessel, daily expected at this place, from the Cape de Verd Islands. A fisherman came down this morning from St. Lucia, (about fifteen miles up the river,) and reports that a boat, with 10 or 12 men, (foreigners,) had landed there—no doubt the Brig's crew.

At this time (the 15th) the Erie was ready for sea, and I believe under sailing orders, for Maldonado—for the protection of our commerce, I suppose—and although she would have been obliged to pass within seven miles of the wreck, the Commodore did not, much to the surprise and astonishment of every one on shore, and I think I may say, without fear of contradiction, to his officers, get his vessel under weigh and proceed to the assistance of the distressed vessel. No! he wished to be certain it was an American before he would render any assistance, or save any property. Had an English Man-of-War been in port, she would have proceeded at once to the spot, as they have always done; and the vessel, perhaps, might have been saved;—they would not have waited to have learnt of what nature she was;—they have always, much to their credit, shown a disposition, and in several instances have been the means of saving a vast deal of property, other than British. What are our vessels of war sent out for—to make a show, or to protect our commerce—or both? If the former, she makes a poor figure of it. One Corvette for the whole of the South American coast, with a Commodore's flag—and with the title of Commander-in-Chief of the American Squadron on the Brazilian coast. If the latter, then in my humble opinion, Commodore R. has not done his duty. I do not speak of this case only—but refer to any Ship Master, or officers of American Men-of-War, who have been on this coast during his command, and ask them if he has not, ever since he has had the command of the station, studied his own comforts and pleasure instead of the interests of the American citizens and the Government who sent him here. He makes his ship his yacht, as far as his own convenience goes, and no farther, and appears not to care one straw for the interests of his countrymen abroad. It is the custom with the English and French Men-of-War, along this coast, always to give reasonable notice when they are about sailing for the port bound to—which notice is put up in the most conspicuous and public place, informing of the day to sail, and at what hour the letter bag will be closed—a courtesy for which we are much indebted, offering, as it does, great facilities to our merchants—but Commodore R. has expressly forbidden it, not only in his own vessel, but in others: alleging as a reason, that our vessels were not sent out to be made Mail Packets of: how selfish and puerile is such conduct. Suppose for a moment the Talisman had been loaded with a valuable cargo—had the Erie proceeded promptly as she ought, most of it might have been saved, and perhaps the vessel, without any loss to our countrymen. But his allowing others to get the start of him, and then placing his men, as it were, under the command of a foreigner, with an assurance that they (his men) should not claim salvage, and giving the foreigner so much of our citizens' money, which they would get as salvage, and which he might have saved, cannot be viewed in any other light than a total disregard of the interests of those whom he is bound in duty as an officer, and in feeling as an American, to protect.

At Rio Grande and Porto Alegre a civil war—our Consul thrown into prison—our citizens' lives in danger—our property at stake—our vessel's detained—all of which Commodore R. knew, with the exception of our Consul being in prison, previous to his leaving this port last September, as he had received advices from an American gentleman at Rio Grande informing him of the state of things in that province, and requesting him to send an armed vessel there for the protection of American lives. Instead of that, though a civil war is raging here, he leaves for Rio de Janeiro, for stores, to return immediately—and, on his arrival there, is waited on by an American merchant of Rio Grande, who, in consequence of having been fired on several times, was obliged to leave the place with his family. This gentleman also wrote Commodore R. and endeavoured to impress upon him the necessity of his fitting a small vessel up, and sending her there, which was approved by our worthy Charge des Affaires, Mr. Hunter. He leaves Rio after being there ten days without doing any thing—promises, or says, he will attend to it. At St. Catherine's, where he remains three weeks, and arrived here a week or ten days since, having been gone for stores over two months, and without having to this day done anything with regard to the Rio Grande expedition.

If such conduct is allowed to pass unnoticed by our Government, such flagrant neglect of duty, not in this case alone, but in many, many others, which the Government must be aware of, then it is time for our citizens and particularly those interested in our Insurance Offices, to have a proper representation made to Congress, as it is a useless waste of public money to send a Man-of-War abroad to gratify the wishes and feelings of Commodore R., who is one of the most unpopular Commanders ever on this station.

Yours truly, A BOSTONIAN.

—An interesting letter from Washington, taking a chronological view of Peyton, is upon our First Page: also, one of considerable importance from an American merchant at Montevideo, animadverting upon the conduct of Capt. RENSHAW. We have always heard Capt. R. highly spoken of as an officer, and cannot but believe that he will be able to relieve his character from the imputation of neglect of duty, upon a full explanation of the circumstances alluded to by our correspondent—as the letter, however, comes from a highly respectable and responsible source, we deem it our duty to publish it, that it may meet the eyes of the government.

The brig Mercator, Towne, from Para, arrived at Salem, on Thursday last, Jan. 6th, Capt. T. discovered a brig off the village of Vigia, under suspicious circumstances, and with such appearances that he concluded she was in possession of the Indians—sent a boat with six armed men, and took possession of her. The Indians, after scuttling her, led to the shore. Discovered from her papers that she was the Brazilian brig Aurora, from Pernambuco for Maranhão. What became of the crew remains to be known—no traces of murder were visible.

Wreck.—The pilot boat Spy discovered a ship sunk about 1-1/2 miles S E from Boston Light, on Saturday, in 10 fathoms water. One of her masts was unstepped, and confined to the hull by the rigging, near the wreck; picked up a tiller, with the ropes attached to it, the tiller painted green, with a diamond cut head, and the letter "T" upon it. The vessel is supposed by the pilots to be from 60 to 80 tons burthen. The tiller and a jacket which was with it, can be seen on board the Spy. The schooner Henry, from the Vinyard, and Paragon, from Portland, are missing.—C. H. Books.

The Four Banks.—Mr. Lawrence yesterday made a report favourable in the main, to the doings of the Lafayette Bank, at South Boston. Thus four suspected banks, viz. the Nahant, Chelsea, Middlesex Interest, and Lafayette banks, have been absolved from Legislative censure, by the special joint committee.

—We had prepared an article for to-day, relative to the incorrect report of the State Senate's proceeding's, published in the Atlas on Saturday, but have been obliged to omit it for want of room—it will appear to-morrow.

—A boy lost a bank book with $1100 in it, in Philadelphia the other day, which was found by Mr. Freeman, a manufacturer of Venetian blinds, and immediately returned to its owner.

When Rached Mihemed had command of the Turkish troops during the Greek war, the Sultan wrote to him—“Mission on thy head!” His answer was—“Mis golonghi.”

From our Special Correspondent.

New York, Feb. 16, 1837.—My dear Sir—Miss Tree has closed her engagement here and departs immediately for Boston. I have just learned from a theatrical friend that she will appear at the Tremont next week and open as usual in The Hunchback. You may remember she was the original Helen in the play and succeeded Miss Kemble in the part of Julia when Fanny came to this country. She was also the original Marianne in the Wife.

I take some interest in the result of her visit to Boston. Not that I anticipate much from the first impressions of those who see her in Julia. That character has been performed so many times that it is difficult to surprise us with anything new. But I feel confident that much more can be made of the part of Master Walter than is usually done. There lies the shadow of the picture by which the light is graduated and effect produced: there is placed the main-spring of the watch which gives life and motion to the whole machinery. I want to see this misanthrope played once, with starting reality, as the elder Kean personified Sir Edward Mortimer. Master Walter is doubtless copied from the Black Dwarf of Scott—“Elshie of Mucklestone Moor.” Compare that hunchback with the one ordinarily represented on the stage, and you will see the difference between the real hunch and that produced by stuffing. Show me a hunchback with the depthless passions, the unsupplied energies the towering ambition of a mighty spirit “cabined, cribbed, confined,” in the form of a shapeless dwarf; and then let him who has “garnered up his soul” in one object, who has spent his life in moulding the character of his only child until he thinks it perfect—meet with bitter disappointment and find “it stands not the test!” The pangs felt by himself prevents him from being easily subdued by the sufferings of others, and it is not until his erring pupil is urged almost to madness that his stern and Roman heart relents. Show me such a hunchback as this, and I want no better Julia than Miss Tree to give the greatest possible effect to the soul-stirring scenes wrought with such miraculous art by the great modern dramatist. But with a hunchback, whose tameness and inanity reminds you of the couplet of Pope—

“From Marlborough's eyes the tears of doting flow
And Swift expires a driveller and a show.”

With a drivelling, drawing, smirking Hunchback, having no more energy in his action nor expression in his features than Maczel's Turk, what effect can be produced by the best Julia in the world!

But then it is also necessary to have a Clifford with some apparent graces of body or of mind to engage the affections of a high-souled woman. Tom Barr would make a better Sir Thomas than half of those I have seen abuse the part; I think Tom should open in this character—“Sir Thomas Clifford, BAR-onet” What a sensation would this passage create in the stomachs of his audience when delivered by him—

“From my door remove the plate that bears my name—
Tell them I keep house no more!!”

Tom wants but one letter from the alphabet to make him manager of the Tremont.

There is nothing in Miss Tree's acting or appearance to arrest your immediate admiration. She does not struggle like Bottom in the play, to “move storms.” All is quiet, subdued, easy, flowing and natural. No attempts at display, no studied graces of posture or action, no elaborate and visible grasping at applause. She acts as if she acted not, so closely does she imitate nature. Barren spectators, who applaud the additions of the clowns, will perhaps consider her no actress at all; and I dare say it will be the general opinion of the Hum-bummers, that she is hugely over-rated. But she will improve upon acquaintance and produce impressions of excellence upon your mind that will never be effaced.

I must reserve further observations on this subject until another opportunity, as the mail is about closing. Excuse my not paying postage—the office is shut. T. B.

Miss Tree met with a flattering reception last evening. The house was full in almost every part. Her acting, we think, will be more popular here than was Miss Kemble's; her style is more even—she plays every scene well, and never crouches that she may bound the higher—whereas, Miss Kemble merely walked through the first acts of Julia, reserving her strength for the fourth, when all the energies of her nature were tasked to their utmost capability. Although, as we have remarked, Miss Tree played the first acts better than Miss K., we are by no means ready to admit that she did not play the last as well; there was not so much violence—furious despair—in her manner; yet it did not lack intensity of feeling and determined resolution; in short, we thought her representation of Julia, throughout, more delicate, natural and pleasing, than Miss K.'s, although perhaps not so startling.

The house appeared to be much gratified at the re-appearance of Mrs. Richardson—her Helen was a very happy and chaste personation—there was an arch innocence in her treatment of Modus, which won the hearts of the audience before her bashful cousin found out what infatuation had seized upon his mind.

Miss Tree's engagement will be the fashionable era of the season at the Tremont. She appears as Rosalind to night.

The Three Experiments of Living, dramatised from a popular tract recently published in this city, was brought out at the National last night, and was received by a large audience with great favor. It is an interesting piece, and teaches those practical lessons of wisdom which every one should study. It will be repeated this evening.

—We are glad that Mr. Buckley is reviving the Opera. The taste which the immortal Woods excited amongst us for this refined amusement, has not in the least abated since their departure, as is proved by the large number of persons who listen to “Oh! Hush!” at the Lion. Mr. Harper's style of singing is rather peculiar, but infinitely more amusing than Wood's—he sang “Sich a gittin up stairs,” dressed in character, last night, in a tone of melodious warbling unequalled in sweetness and pathos.

To be serious, Mr. Buckley gets up the most diverting entertainments of their character that have ever been witnessed in Boston, and merits a liberal patronage.

O'Connell, the celebrated tattooed man, whose life by Mr. Weld is the most amusing book of the season, and deserves as lasting a fame as Robinson Crusoe, is doing a smart business in Shackford's Hall, Brighton, by exhibiting himself, and giving descriptions of the savages he has been amongst.

—The representation of the Last Supper, at Harding's Gallery, was attended by a large number on Sunday.

—We have read with much interest Mr. Gillett's Speech in Congress on the Bill making appropriations for Authors, and shall publish extracts from it hereafter.

Mr. Herrod, of Indianapolis, has been elected to Congress from the State of Indiana, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the Hon. G. L. Kinnard.

Discord.—Mr. Gegan, a professor of music in Baltimore the Seine.—The accounts from Paris state, that the Seine has overflowed its banks in many places, and laid the surrounding country under water.

POLICE COURT.

Three Wood Thieves, all in a row.—John McPhley was brought up at the suit of Frederick Taylor, wharfinger, for “stealing a stick of wharf wood, of the value of ten cents.” John pleaded guilty, and craved mercy, averring that he had never been brought before a magistrate, since he came to this country. He also said, that as he had some sons bound out apprentices, he thought he should be able to raise money to pay a fine with. So he was fined $2 00, and costs.

John Carr, quite a well-dressed personage, was, at the instance of the complainant aforesaid, charged with “stealing one stick of maple wood, of the value of eight cents.” Pleaded guilty, but made no talk. Fined $2 00, &c., as above.

John Ferguson, by complainant aforesaid, was charged with “stealing one stick of white pine wood, of the value of eight cents.” Pleaded guilty, but inasmuch as he had been to the House of Correction, things looked rather dubious for him; but at length the milk of human kindness got the better of his Honor's stern predisposition, and John was let off upon the same condition as his compatriots.

In giving the last sentence, his honor said—“When I think of the inclemency of the recent weather, and the exorbitant price of wood, I cannot but look at the cases of these defendants with some degree of commiseration. If a wood wharf be accessible, and on one of these cold nights, people go and take a stick of wood, it is a circumstance of mitigation; but still the necessity is not of the kind which justifies such general depredations upon the property of wood dealers.”

SUPREME J. COURT.—Award of Referees in the case of Thomas P. Brown vs. Boston and Providence Railroad Co.—The referees yesterday sent into Court their award, giving to Brown, for damages sustained by the collision of the cars in June last, Seven Thousand Dollars, and costs of Court, witness fees, and expenses of the Reference. No exception was taken by the Counsel for the Corporation.

Friday, Feb. 17.—There was no business of general importance finally acted on in the Senate to-day, and the House was occupied almost entirely with the trial of R. M. Whitney.

Mr. Hamer being still under examination, and the question recurring upon the interrogatory propounded by Mr. Peyton, and objected to by Mr. McKeon, the former modified it, and in that form it was put.

The cross examination of Mr. Hamer was concluded, when Mr. Martin and Mr. Gillett severally gave answers to the interrogatories first propounded to Mr. Fairfield, when, on motion, the House adjourned at half past six.

CHARLESTON, FEB. 18—2, P. M.

IMPORTANT FROM FLORIDA.
Col. ANDREWS, U. S. Army, arrived at St. Augustine, 11th inst., express, and informs that Gen. JESUP, had an engagement with the Indians, which lasted two days, on the second day JUMPER and ALIGATOR came in under a flag of truce, and surrendered themselves, stating that the Indians were in a distressed situation, and anxious for peace.

During the engagement, four U. S. soldiers and four Indians, were killed—one hundred Indians and Negroes were taken prisoners. Col. Andrews informs that Jumper and Alligator appointed the 18th inst., as the day to conclude a treaty at Dade's Battleground, and had dispatched express to the Indians to inform them of the arrangement. They stated that Powell was on an island in the Withlacoochee with about one hundred and fifty followers, who supposed that he would come to terms, and should be refused they would point out where he was. All hostilities were to cease by both parties until after the 18th instant.

GREAT FIRE.

Telegraph Office, —Bath, Me.
Friday Morning, Feb. 17th, 1837.

Last night our town was the scene of a fire, which for extent, and the amount of property destroyed, exceeded anything of the kind ever before witnessed in this place.

The fire originated in a two story wooden building, occupied by Mr. Parsons Smith and Samuel Foote. When the alarm was given, at about 11 o'clock, the fire had made such progress in this building as to render it utterly impossible to save this store or any thing it contained. At the time the fire broke out, the wind was blowing violently from the North East, accompanied with a severe snow storm. The flames increased rapidly, and being driven by the wind to the opposite side of the street, all of the surrounding buildings were soon enveloped in one sheet of fire, threatening destruction far and wide. By the indefatigable exertions of our citizens, the fire was checked after having consumed twenty-four buildings, and damaged many others.

There could not have been a more unfortunate time for a fire. The scarcity of water (it being low tide) added to the coldness of the weather, prevented the engines working freely, and rendered almost every attempt of the citizens unavailing. How the fire originated is not known—supposed to have taken from a defect in the stove pipe or chimney.

The whole amount of loss we have not been able to ascertain—probably not far from $50,000.
